

Name: Anju Salvi

Age: 34

Disability: Polio (Wheelchair user)

About Anju

Despite the limitations caused by Anju's disability, she successfully completed her education up to the 7th grade from SEC Day school. After which she continued her education and completed 10th grade in mainstream school.

Throughout her academic pursuits, Anju had passion for tailoring. She kept polishing her skills in tailoring and alteration work, taking help of the internet to learn and practice from her home. She dedicated herself to crafting cloth bags and engaging in various tailoring-related artistic work, which she started selling to contribute to her household income.

Anju's Ambition and I&IP Role

Anjus always aspired to become a recognized fashion designer. She discovered an online platform called Skill in a Box for fashion designing.

Enrolling in the course seemed like a dream, but with the support from the Integration and Inclusion Program, she was able to enrol in this course. Currently she is in the final stages of completing this course

Anju realizes that getting the knowledge and certificate from Skill in a Box, partnered with the National Skill Development Corporation will open doors to opportunities in the fashion industry.

With determination and support from the I&IP Inclusion Program, Anju is on the way to realizing her dreams of being in the fashion industry despite the limitations due to her physical disability.
